What is a Social Network?

- A social network site is a web-site that allows members to:
 - Create a profile of personal information to share with others
 - Create a personal network of “friends” (Facebook) or “connections” (LinkedIn)
 - Expand their personal network through invitations to other members (“friend of a friend”)
 - Join interest groups
 - Get and share information
 - Public messages and questions
 - Private messages & email

Social Networks May be Public or Private

Public		Private (in house)
LinkedIn	MySpace	Microsoft Town Square
Facebook	Plaxo	IBM's Blue Pages
		Best Buy Blue Shirt Nation

Public sites let you connect to an extended network

Private sites are for a closed or pre-approved group & protect sensitive information from outsiders

Social Networks are Becoming Mainstream

- Public sites
 - 66 million use Facebook daily
 - 20 million LinkedIn users

- Company sponsored sites
 - About 50% of large companies and 75% of small ones (<500 employees) are using web 2.0/social media of all types
 - Of those, estimates of 40-60% have social networks, including externally facing and private sites

The top 3 issues:

- attracting people
- engaging them
- managing the site

 - 9,000 members; 320,000 connections

External: I'm Recruiting for my Company – Using Facebook

I've created a Facebook group called Careers at MyCompany to attract people interested in working with us. We display news, contact information, answer questions and moderate discussions.

I've also launched a private Company Alumni network to maintain relationships with former employees that I can re-recruit as full-time or part-time staff.

Here we share more proprietary news, resources and discussions; host events; and keep alumni on the "inside"

Reviewed the download quickly and did not notice any mention of "Twitter"your thoughts please...is it here to stay OR a passing "whim"?

Q & A

With so many new social networks showing up how do I manage this or select one to focus on? What's the best approach?

Q & A

What are some of the cautions or risks associated with social networks?

Q & A

What platform(s) were used for the DOW Social Networks?

Q & A

As we have released the so called collaborative tools, the effect has been...our employees do not talk anymore. They spend time typing e-mails or creating notes in our ERP system. This behavior has dramatically reduced effectiveness and increased frustration due to the lack of interaction. Have you seen this effect and how might you address this?
